Richardson to Replace Laird

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (IHT). -Pre-ident Nixon today began shaping his "new look" cabinet, shifting Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Elliot Richardson to head the Defense Depart-ment and naming Office of Management and Budget Director Caspar Weinberger to he HEW

The President also appointed Roy L. Ash to replace Mr. Weinberger in the cabinet-level post of director of the OMB.

The 54-year-old Mr. Ash. nresident of Litton Industries, Inc., is the ooly new face so far in Mr. Nixon's second-term cabinet. In 1989 he was named chairman of tine President's Advisory Council on Government Reorganization, vhich first recommended setting up the OMB.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (NYT).-Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau announced yesterday 18 changes in a reconstructed cabinet following the Oct. 30 election in which his Liberal government was reduced to minority strength in Eight persons were brought into the 30-member cabinet to replace four ministers who lost election contests and four who withdrew for other reasons.

Among the new members was the first woman to sit in a Tru-deau cabinet. She is Mrs. Jeanne Saure, 50, a Montreal journalist and broadcaster who was appoint-ed Minister of Science and Technology.

Alastair W. Gillespie, a former Science Minister, was promoted to Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, replacing Jean-Luc Pepin, who lest his seat from Quebec. Mr. Pepin played an important role in the continuing negotiations to resolve a number of trade disputes between the United States and Canada.

As a rule, Canadian cabinet on East-West relations, European ministers are drawn from members of the government party in the House of Commons. In the election, Liberal members were reduced from 147 to 109, leaving a majority of seats in the 264member Commons to opposition parties.

Twelve ministers, including a half dozen high-ranking ones, were retained. Among them was Mitchell Sharp, who has been Secretary of State for External Affairs for the last four years Others included Paul Martin, the government leader in the Senate; Otto Lang, Justice Minister, and Donald S. MacDonald, Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Mr. Trudeau said at a news conference that his cabinet changes reflected the lessons he had learned in the Liberals' elec-"We intend to govern in a way

Gains by the Socialists, who were excluded from the government after last May's general clection and were replaced by the right-of-center Liberals, appeared to indicate a tendency to return to center-left government.

The center-left alliance between the Christian Democrats, Italy's higgest party, and the Socialists lasted for 10 years until it collapsed early this year. But the Socialists are now hoping to oust the Liberals from the government and return to power.

Compared to the last general election, the Socialists increased their share of the popular vote— 12.3 percent—by more than 3 per-cent, while the Liberals lost 0.2 percent-to 28 percent. The voting Sunday and yes-

Canada Is Said To Delay Taking Peace Unit Role

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP). Canada will hold up its decision on joining a Vietnam cease-fire eupervisory commission until it learns the results of an international conference that would not convene until after the fighting atops, a diplomatic source said

The Canadian position could put a crimp in U.S. planning, which calls for a supervisory apparatus to be in place when a cease-fire goes into effect.

The source, who would not allow his name or nationality to be used, said Canada had set several conditions on joining the peace-keeping operation.

Be said these include freedom of mobility for the four-nation supervisory commission, freedom for each member to report its findings as it sees fit, a guarantee that an international body will beer the reports, and assurances that all four parties in the fighting want Canadian participation.

He said that only after the end of the peace negotiations and the results of the international conference are known can Ottawa make up its mind,

The source, who has intimate knowledge of Canadian diplomatic policy and is experienced in the past Vietnam peace supervisory efforts, said the conditions result from lessons learned by Canada's participation on the International Control Commission.

The loss in the 315-seat Senate reduced the majority of the government parties to four .. Overall, the results showed that the Christian Democrats were holding their own, but appeared to indicate that Premier Giulio Andrectti's center coalition inspires little voter enthusiasm.

The government was in a position to assert that the ruling majority had gained in the poll, as the total share of the votes going to the four parties supporting the government in parliament increased to 48.4 percent from 47.8 percent in the general elec-

But the gains were made entirely by the two left-leaning parties in the governing majority— the Social Democrats end the Republicans—both of which are traditionally identified with the center-left and decided to support the covernment because there appeared to be no alternative.

Take-Out Trade At Restaurant Goes Too Far

MIAMI, Nov. 28 (AP).-For the assistant manager of a fried chicken restaurant in Miami, a middle-aged man wearing a toupee and waving a gun has become a familiar figure.

"I knew why he was there

I just walked over and opened the cash register," Ronald Bushnell said last weekend after the same man held up his shop for the fourth time in less than two weeks, "He was turning out to be my best costomer," Mr. Bushnell said. After the fourth robbery, however. Mlami police arrested Maxwell Garland Roberts 43, a recently paroled bank robber. He was arrested at 2 motel within walking distant of the restaurant.

Then came an explosion of liberalism an explosion of new ideas, an explosion of youth One sign was the leadership taken by the Dutch Roman Catholic history in the aggreriamento hautched by the late Pope John EXIII. The Dutch reforms, which later got the literarchy into trouble in Rome, were spurred by the Dutch fock.

The easing of censorship con-trols made Amsterdam into a city that was easily the rival of Copenhagen and New York as a center of normography. Drugs were sold openly, even advertised. Youth groups such as the Provos and the Kabouters were able to get their representatives elected to city government posts and stimulate fresh thinking Young married priests were openly saying mass.

Four Main Groups There are four main groups of . parties represented in the par-liament: progressive parties led by the Socialists, the three principal religious parties (the Catholic People's party and two Calvinist parties), the conservatives and the extreme left. The government fell in July when a conservative-oriented splinter group of the Socialists, a. party called DS-70 (Social Democrats of 1970), resigned from a coalition led by the religious parties over a dispute about fighting inflation.

After weeks of trying to repair the coalition new elections were-finally called for November, only 18 months after the previous elections.

Catholic party chairman Dick de Zeenw said that it is essential to broaden the base and change the names of the religious parties and to reduce the everall number of parties, if stability is return to the political Coalition Sought the election.

Hans Ouwerkerk, the youthful secretary of the Socialists, said that the Socialists don't trust the Catholic party. Together, the two now have 74 seats in the 150-seat parliament, the Socialists, 39, and the Catholics, 35.

From the way the Netherlands looks, it is hard to tell that an election is taking place at all. For example, there are practically no posters. One of the few things the parties were able to agree on was a cutback in poster distribution to keep the country

Russia Indicates It Wants Better Ties to Albania

MOSCOW, Nov. 28' (Reuters). The Kremlin today indicated that it is eager to patch up dif-ferences with Albania.

The call for a resumption of diplomatic ties, broken since 1961, came in the government daily, Izvestia. A lengthy commentary recalled Soviet-Albanian cooperation in the 1950s and termed the present state of affairs between them "abnormal."

Apparently referring to Peking's likely interest in a continued estrangement, Izvestia said that auch conditions could only be of advantage to "the enemlet of Socialism and external forces completely indifferent to the Albanian people's national inter-ests. China maintains close ties with Albania.

Earlier this month, a Soviet journal said that a resumption of diplomatic ties would be an important step toward a general recovery in Soviet-Albanian relations. Moscow's East European allies have maintained diplomatic and trade links with Albania .

The renewed Soviet overtures to Albania, made as Moscow-Peking relations appeared to be at a low point suggested that Moscow was trying to take ad-vantage of Albanian concern over Peking's rapprochement with the West, observers said.

It reflected the hopelessness of trying to meet rising costs and keeping the defense budget pro-portional to overall expenditures. while at the same time meeting NATO commitments at least on paper. West Germany has, in principle, 36 brigades committed to NATO, of which 33 are actually operative. The new system would reduce the standing commitment to 24 full brigades, plus 12 cadre brigades.

These cadre brigades would be only 25 percent of full strength and consist entirely of regular soldiers, while the full brigades would have a 40-60 ratio of regulars to conscripts. The rest of the paper strength of the cadre brigades would be made up of reservists, and could be brought up to full strength within three in this way West Germany's commitment to NATO would be fully met, if only on paper. The tax and bonus proposal on potential draftees met with sharp criticism. Four members of the commission, including two labor union leaders, rejected it as disministery.

Under the proposal, a roung man who chooses not to do his 15 months military sarvice would have to pay 1.500 marks. The draftee would get a similar bonus, plus educational, and pension benefits. In effect, those who could afford it could buy their way out of inditiory service, if the government accepts the proposal. This may be too difficult a pill for Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democratz to swallow, dedicated as they are to greater, not lesser

The government reserved immediate comment on the report, saying it needed close scrutiny.

Magee Assaults His Lawyer At Beginning of Murder Trial Back to Jail

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28 .-Ruchell Mages leaped from his chair and struck his court-appointed attorney before startled prospective jurors in a tumultuous beginning to his murder-kidnapping trial here yesterday.

Later, despite protests from both the defense and prosecu-tion, the judge announced his intention of sequestering the jurors and their alternates after they have been sworn in for what is expected to be a long trial.

Reporter Sent For Contempt

By Gene Blake LOS ANGELES Nov. 28.—Los Angeles Times reporter William T. Fair was sent back to jail yesterday for an indefinite con-tempt sentence after accusing two unnamed attorneys in the Manson murder case of again perjuring themselves in court.

prosecutors and three defense lawyers swore before Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older that they had made no deal with Mr. Farr. They said he was free to tell where he obtained Manson case material released in violation of a court order.

that two of the attorneys had "implored and beseeched" him to disregard whatever waiver of confidentiality they might make. He declined to say when it happened, or who the attorneys were, the reporter either was being a "martyr without a cause," or had made some kind of an "underthe-table" deal with the attorneys, A 'Slur'

Mr. Farr took exception to the judge's remark about being a martyr, calling it a "slur." "It is a problem of personal con-science and professional ethics, not for the purpose of martyr-

ing," he told Judge Older. "Tm one who knows, and you do Mr. Farr's attorney, Mark E. Hurwitz, asked for a stay of execution of the sentence until this and the reporter was taken immediately to the Los Angeles County jail, where he had spent

4 1/2 hours on Nov. 16. Mr. Hurwitz said he would ask the State Supreme Court in San Francisco to free Mr. Farr pending action on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Older said court orders restricting release of information by attorneys and court personnel in pending cases have become a "necessary accommodation" to preserve the rights of both a free oress and fair trial. He said Mr. Farr admitted he "set out deliberately to subvert the purposes" of such an order by soliciting persons to violate it in the Manson case.

West Virginia Liquor Stores Are Struck by 'White Lightning'

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 28 (AP) .- The state of West Virginia has gone into the business of selling moonshine.

The state Alcohol Beverage Control Commission has stocked several of its stores with two brands of old-fashioned white corn whisker, "guaranteed to be less than 30 days old."

"One of the main reasons we decided to put it on the shelves," said an official, Richard Barber, "is that many people just like the taste of moonshine. We had quite a bit of demand for it."

The two brands sold in about 60 stores ara Booneshine, a 100-proof whiskey made in Cincinnati, and Georgia Moon, an 86-proof variety made in Georgia. "It's distilled just like regular whiskey," Mr. Barber said.

"The big difference is that white whiskey isn't put in charred berreis to age. Supposedly the longer whiskey ages, tha smoother it gets." Mr. Barber reported that sales are brisk, averaging 70 cases a month of both brands.

Although the legal moonshine costs about twice as much $4.41 a fifth—as illegal "white lightning," Mr. Barber said that it had one advantage over home brew. Indian and Pakistani Generals Hold Talks

NEW DELET, Nov. 28 (Reuters).—The Indian and Pakistani army chiefs of staff today failed to resolve the dispute surrounding a truce line in divided Kashmir and decided to refer the issue back to their governments.

A joint statement said that in talks lasting more than three hours, Gen. Sam Manekshaw of India and Lt. Gen. Tikka Khan of Pakistan discussed various ways of settling the dispute.

But they differed over the interpretation of a clause in the Simia peace agreement signed by both countries last July.

The Indian Army leader spent six hours in Jahore, Pakistan, today for his first meeting with his Pakistani counterpart. Talks at a lower level had stalled.

Two old Argentine soldiers President Alejandro A Lanusse and former President Juan D. Peron, have put the question to-the public in the latest phase of an effort at political conciliation

In a weekend press conference, Mr. Peron, 77, told a Paraguayan newsman that the army of his landlocked nation is "the most glorious of all the continent." Mr. Peron's affection for Paraguay goes back to 1955, when it sheltered him following his ouster from the presidency in a mili-

President Lanusse, 54, who is also commander-in-chief of the army, sent telegrams yesterday to all units declaring his "profound displeasure" at Mr. Peron's slight on "the noble tradition of all American armies." No Fermal Action

Mr. Lanusse said that the army would take no formal action against Mr. Peron since he had been sacked from its files long

Informed of Mr. Lanusse's telegram, Mr. Peron replied:
"I'm a general in the army of Paraguay and I do not believe there is any general who does not believe his own is the most glorious."

Mr. Peron began his political career as a colonel and had him-self promoted to general only to lose the title with the presidency in 1955. His admirers still call him "the general."

Part of the effort at reconciling the armed forces and followers of Mr. Peron consisted of restoring the former dictator's rights. Charges against him, incloding one for statutory rape. have been dropped, but the army commission was not restored. The Paraguayan generalship is honorary, as is the passport of the same nation with which Mr. Peron traveled from exile in Whether or not Paraguay's army is glorious, it was the victor in the last South American conflict.

Paraguay defeated Bollvia in the Chaco Wer of 1936. Internal Enemies Argentina's army of 80,000 men is more than four times as big as Paraguay's. The only armed conflicts of the Argentine force in this century have been against internal enemies or between its own factions. Mr. Lanusse's highly publicited telegram was an obvious appeal to the intense nationalism here. But whether this nationalism extends to total defense of the army is unproven. A public opinion survey several years ago found the citizenry put generals way below businessmen or politicians when ranking esteem.

THEATER IN PARIS

Dubillard's Latest Play: A Success With a Secret

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

Dubillard, poet, playwright, actor, is as gifted as he is versatile. He is the most original and binarre personality on the French theatrical scene since Boris Vian.

Dubillard's latest play. "On Bolycut les Vaches"—with the author in the leading role—has just opened at the Theatre Recamier under the direction of Roger Blin, whose staging of "Waiting for Godot"—when no other would dare it—brought Bockelt world fame as a drama-

Dubillard began as a cabaret performer, under the name of Gregoire, and his first play, "Naïves Hirondelles." was produced at the Théatre de Pocise-Montparnasse in 196i. The critics were harsh. But two fellow dramatists, André Rousslu and Eugene Ionesco, wrote of it so enthusiastically that, one by one, the shome-faced critics went back for a second look and reversed their initial verdict. This resulted in a long run for "Naives Hirondelles," with a French company playing it in London. It was later translated into English. "La Maison d'Os," Dubiliard's second play, a drama of darker hue, was iess successful. From then until now, the author has been acting in works by others. Last season he was the drunken drama critic in the Atelier production of a London comedy, "After Haggerty," and he gives a moving per-formance as the hopeless alcoholic n the film, "Quelque Part Quelqu'un" (at the Pagode Cinéma).

Phrase From Rimbaud

For his new play. Dubillard has aken a phrase from Rimbaud is his title. To outline the action rould be absurd for it is an "aburd" play. Much of "Où Boivent les

'aches"-indeed most of it-renains deliberately obscure. It s a drama of inklings, playing rith eternal verities. The subects ere life, death and man's solated state. It asks questions, art it offers no answers. Dramaurgy of this brand depends on he author's ability to enlist the pectator's imagination. How this accomplished is a secret, but Jubillard succeeds.

The central figure-which he plays with omusing childish rhine and, sometimes, with comelling desperation—is an authorirchitect who has won a literary igard. Much to his approvance ie is interviewed and an envoy from the Ministry of Beaux-Arts errives to commission him to wild the Medict fountain on the

Afterwards in the postmortem sequence, the structure begins to wobble. Dubillard seems in doubt when to let go and the evening's second half is overextended. Notwithstanding this falling off toward the finish. "Où Boivent les Vaches" is a work of fascinating dazzle, brilliantly played and expertly staged. In both its writing and in its production there is true theatrical magic.

The internationally popular Robert Dhery's revue, "Les Bran-quignols" (at the Theatre La Bruyère), provides another testimonial to his skill as both a showman and a clown. A bit of Dhéry now and again is a serviceable diversion against the labored unfunniness of so many nonmusical comedies. He has selected here a collection of skits, supposedly numbers being performed by aspiring beginners on an amateur night. Some are new and some are not so new—tha bell-ringing monks skipping about as they toll matins was in "Ah! Les Belles Bacchantes," in which Louis de Funès first came to the fore. But all the material is merry, fast paced and welcome. Dhery-whose "La Plume de

His current vehicle is well balanced, retaining its freshness and fun throughout. Nothing is overdone, nothing is insisted upon, nothing lags, nothing is monotonously repeated. MUSIC IN GERMANY for a long time has West Berlin enjoyed so gala an operatic evening as the opening of Otto Schenk's bright new production of "Cosi Fan Tutte" last night. On nights like this, the Deutscha Oper Berlin can hold its own with any opera house in the world, The audience, invigorated by the idea of a cast consisting of Luigi Alva, Brigitte Fassbaender, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Erika Köth, Pilar Lorengar, and Barry Mc-Daniel, arrived in a holiday mood, and the entry of Karl Böhm into the pit touched off the first of many ovations before a single note of music had sounded.

This audience rarely applauds stage settings, but it spontane-ously applauded the sumptuous work of Juergen Rose, and not once but twice. The chorus, prepared by the redoubtable Walter Hagen-Groll, has relatively little to do in this work, but both it and the orchestra extended themselves in a successful attempt to prove worthy of the soloists and conductor.

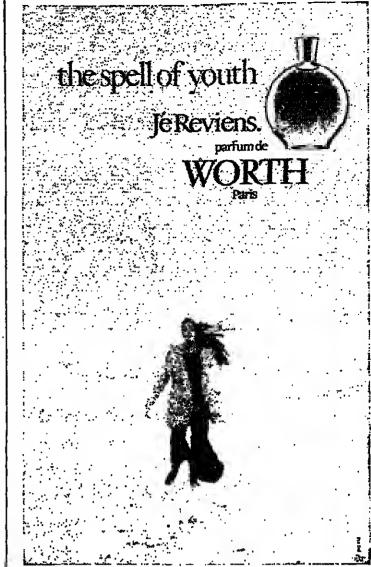

Egon Seefehlner, the new In-tendant of the Deutsche Oper Berlin, shows a regrettably regressive tendency to abandon the praiseworthy German tradition of presenting opera to audiences in the vernacular they understand. That practice, as most people realize who have become accustomed to it, results in an immediacy of comprehension and communication between singers and their auditors for which no amount of pre-performance libretto-studying BERLIN, Nov. 28 (IHT).—Not can provide an adequate substitute.

> Yet this new production of "Cost Fan Tutte," with half its cast native German speakers and the other half bilingual, deliberately chooses to alienate this sparkling work from its audience by cutting the vast majority of them off from the text-which, for all its feeble-minded comedy of errors, does after all constitute one half of the work of art. Even in the recitatives, which one can easily follow almost word for word as long as one knows the language, the audience sat through all that Italian almost dumb.

The audience accorded Miss Lorengar, as Piordiligi, two shouting ovations for her arias, and she thoroughly deserved them; on stage, Mr. Fischer-Dieskau even joined in one of them. As Don Alfonso, he showed considerable flair for foxy-grandpa clowning. and he sang with his accustomed mastery. Miss Fassbaender, as Dorabella, sang with memorable musicality and tonal beauty. Tiny Miss Koth, playing Mutt to the towering Mr. Fischer-Dieskau's Jeff, had the audience holding its sides during her two transvestite turns, and she also sang Despine's role to perfection. Mr. Alva, as Ferrando, got a big hand for his main aria, and Mr. McDaniel, always an outstandingly musical and intelligent singer, proved him-self up to standard as Gugllelmo. Mr. Böhm got a thunderous ovation when he joined in the curtain-calls, which went on and on

The Vietnam Handshake

White House briefing by Dr. Henry Kissinger. "We remain convinced that the issues that I have mentioned are soluble in a very brief period of time." President Nixon's negotiator said. "We have undertaken, and I repeat it here publicly, to settle them at one more meeting and to remain at that meeting for as long as is necessary to complete the agreement." This undertaking to the people of the United States and of Vietnam has now been broken. Perhaps the reasons are technical, but there are ominous signs that more profound considerations may be promoting ruinous second thoughts.

White House spokesmen now stress the quest for "a settlement that will last, not just for the short term but for the long term." This smacks dangerously of the inflated war aims that kept the Johnson and Nixon administrations fighting so intensely in Vietnam long after knowledgeable strategists had concluded these aims were unattainable.

Far from envisaging a disengagement of American personnel from Vietuam, the administration is revealed to have embarked on a secret build-up of "civilian" personnel under Defense Department contract to "advise" the South Vietnamese military establishment. And four weeks after the White House declared that "peace is at hand," the United States carried out two days of what was officially described as the heaviest B-52 bombardment of North Vietnam of the whole

One month has elapsed since that dramatic parently gained in the past month of jockeying. President Thieu has sent a special envoy to meet Mr. Nixon this week, after which he is to accompany Dr Kissinger to the renewed dialogue with Hanoi's Le Duc The next week Among the "ciarifications" the United States is reportedly seeking from North Vietnam is a specific pledge to withdraw some of its troops from the South after the cease-fire, thus soothing one of President Thieu's deepest fears. From the start, Dr. Kissinger's critics and supporters alike spotted the absence of any visible concession by Hanoi on this point as a critical element in the give-and-take that had gone into the basic accord; if it is being injected as a new element at this stage, what is left of the whole issue of understanding?

It seems impossible to doubt, from the statements of both sides, that Dr. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho reached a handshake agreement a month ago to end 10 years of war in Vietnam; the White House disclosed this . tentative accord just before the American presidential elections. As every collective bargainer knows, the whole concept of negotiation is built on mutual respect for the integrity of such agreements, whatever minor difficulties may attend their translation into formal contract language. If a veto by President Thieu is leading to United States insistence on renegotiation of one or more of the most fundamental clauses in the agreement, the promised light at the end of the tunnel may once again be receding into dim shadow.

Letting Mr. Sadat 'Sweat It Out'

Twice in two weeks the tacit mutual guidelines for relative calm on the border between Syria and Israeli-occupied Golan have been breached, and hours-long artiflery and air duels have taken place. Militarily, these seem to have had no particular importance in themselves or as harbingers of broader fighting to come. Syria, with its new Russian weapons (a means by which it can one-up currently quiescent Egypt), may have its own political reasons to strut its military stuff. Israel, not often reluctant to exercise its immense American-supplied arsenal, may not have been entirely displeased to use guerrilla provocations as a pretext to shoot back in a major way. These are essentially irresponsible uses of force on both sides, although it should be noted that Israel has had the discretion not to launch at Syria, which enjoys Soviet patronage, the same kind of conspicuous land invasions which it has recently launched into Lebanon, a country with no foreign patronage at all.

All the same, it is disturbing to find Israelis publicly claiming that they shelled six Syrian civilian villages—not Palestinian camps but Syrian villages-"to give the Syrians a signal that they should stop shelling our civilian settlements." The settlements in question are those Israel has established on territory it seized in 1967. The "signal" Israel is giving, whether or not it so concedes, is that shelling civilian villages is permissible. Such a "signal" does much to undermine the presumed basis of moral superiority on which Israel commonly bases its appeals for sympathy and support in the West. Is Mrs. Meir now prepared to state that as a matter of high policy, Israel has erased the distinction it had previously claimed to respect between civilian and military targets? Americans, who supply the airplanes being used, have a right to know. Syria, however, is a sideshow, with a population a sixth of Egypt's, a military budget barely a tenth, and a capital quite completely open to Israeli strikes. Egypt is the main act. The Israeli-Egyptian cease-fire line at Suez remains quiet: Soldiers banter back and forth across the dead water. With most of the Soviet stiffening gone from Egypt's own forces, not even Israel's successive humiliations of Lebanon and Syria have been able to provoke a careful Cairo into fulfilling its trumpeted "commitments" to help defend its allies. On Friday, the authoritative Egyptian commentator, Mr. Heikal, noted that the world, otherwise preoccupied with progress and detente, was tiring of the Mideast. He seemed to be conceding that time was not on Egypt's side.

This line complements that recently offered by Mr. Eban, Israel's foreign minister. who said (shades of Richard Nixon?) the best Israeli policy now is to let Mr. Sadat "sweat it out," his range of alternatives narrowing all the time, driving him eventually to discussions with Israel itself. A limited agreement opening the Suez Canal could be the first step. If Mr. Eban's prediction turns out to be more than a rationale for Israell rigidity, then the success of any such Egyptian turn will depend in large part on whether Israel stands on its military superiority and demands immediate and conspicnous Egyptian concessions, or whether it treats Egypt as a neighbor whose long-range cooperation it has got to earn and reward.

An Egyptian decision to open some kind of negotiations with Israel would be difficult but would surely be met with 'road understanding. Cairo's military vulnerability would give it the underdog's somewhat compensating political advantage. Farseeing Israelis would be tested in their contention that Israel does not expect or hope to "impose" a lasting, mutually valuable settlement with its jets and tanks and guns.

Tito's 'Cultural Revolution'

The purges and shakeups which have lately been sweeping through Yugoslavia constitute a regressive reaction by Tito against a regional patriotism that had grown virulent in some parts of the Yugoslav federation and threatened its continued cohesion-with the aid not only of exiled Croatians but also of Soviet agents.

Yugoslavia has gone further than the other Eastern countries in the difficult, if not impossible attempt to become liberal, federalistic and prosperous, and at the same time to remain the dominion of a ruling Communist party. To date the experiment has yielded a zigzag course which is a source of worry and concern to the country's own people and its friends elsewhere. This is partly because no one knows how, and by whom, the six republics and two autonomous regions between the Adriatic and the Danube will be held together when Tito departs from the

Deadlock in Peace Talks

Although it is, in one obvious sense, disappointing that the Victuam peace talks should have reached a state of apparent deadlock, in another sense it is quite encouraging. For it does suggest that President Nixon is not determined to get out of Vietnam as soon as possible and on virtually any terms. The so-called "draft accord" which was released by Hanoi before the presidential election did rather give that impression. Time is well worth taking . . . the important thing is to achieve, not a rapid settlement, but a settlement which will last and which will give the people of South Vietnam the right and real opportunity to determine their own political destiny. This will not be possible if North Vietnamese troops are allowed to stay in the country after a cease-fire. On this point, Washington and Salgon should keep their heels we'll dug in.

Marx and Marxist Germany

By C. L. Sulzberger

DRESDEN, East Germany.—By its energetic reconstruction this Sexon capital, famous for its fine buildings overlooking the Eibe, for its craftsmen and for the magnificent paintings in its art gallery, typifies the German Democratic Republic now rising like a small phoenix in the Communist world.

Dresden was smashed by an Anglo-American bombing raid in February, 1945, when the Allies sought to help the Soviet Army destroy Hitler. Contemporary propagands (including the museum catalogue) describes that assault as "barbarie" and "meaningless to the assalisate." Propaganda is a notable aspect of the system and until very recently it has been angrily hostile to the

But propaganda is capable of shifting—and the East today shows more tolerance of both the German Federal Republic in Bonn and its Western allies. After all, the line has changed on far more fundamental things. For example, in a book called Introducing the GDR," given me by East Germany's boss, Erich Honecker, it is recalled that in

"The Communist League, led by Karl Mary and Priedrich Engels, came into existence... the slogen of this party: 'All Germany shall be declared a unified, indivisible republic' fully corresponded to the interests of the people and

'Firmly Anchored'

Nowadays the only unity sought by the Democratic Republic is with the Soviet Union. As the book also says: "The most important foreign policy task of the GDR consists in becoming ev more firmly anchored" in the socialist "community by com-prehensively deepening the alliance with the Soviet Union as well as the other fraternal socialist countries."

The book continues: "As long as the FRG (Federal German Republic) is an imperialist state the relations between the GDR and the FRG can only be those of peacefull coexistence according to the rules of international law. Relations of another kind are impossible between states with differing social systems."

Honecker spelled this out yet further to me by saying of the two Germanys that their "two ideologies mutually exclude each other" and that it was "an advantage to the world" to see two separate German states.

The East German boss is proud that his country is second only to the Soviet Union among Warsaw Pact members in terms of incustrial production and high living standards. He says the annual growth rate of the GNP is between 6 and 7 percent with labor productivity rapidly increas-ing. But, unlike West Germany. East Germany had no intention of "instituting a guest labor system" by admitting large numbers of foreign workers.

Global Rating

Honecics was not sure of the giobal rating of East Germany as an industrial power. Ot is variously listed as number 8, 9, 10, 12 and 14, depending on which sta-tistical compilation is consulted.)

A listing used by American diplomats gives West Germany num ber four position in the world (after the United States, Russia and Japan) with a GNP worth $234 billion Cless than a fourth that of America and less than half that of the Soviet Union and gives East Germany number 14 position with slightly over $35 billion.

How can such masterpieces, of almost incalculable value on the legal market, be spirited out of great public (or even private) collections? Are they not under guard? And how could a thief hope to sell them? A few remarks come to mind no secret to Interpol, of course, but perhaps of interest to some readers who, like the undersigned, have been puzzling over these matters for years. First, such pictures must be not only valuable (which is a variable), but of such dimensions as to be easily smuggled past the bored, jaded and underpaid guards. Second, once the theft has been accomplished, there must be unscrupulous collectors in many countries who would bid high for the result. How else were the very great collections of paintings forbidden to be exported from Italy) ever made in the first place? And it is still going on,

At some point between the two operations some question of taste. inevitably arises; sometimes the thief is drawn to a certain picture not merely because of cash value and portability, but also because he happens to like it: and the collectors (even the most ignorant of them) are often drawn to a picture without knowing why. One of the most famous of all private collections was accumulated moinly in this way. ("I don't know anything about Art but I know what I like.")

I once knew a most reprehensible man in Venice who dreamed of stealing the St. George of Mantegna out of the Accademia; he said it was the right size to fit under his overcoat and was complete destruction of the pur-of awesoms value, and anyhow chasing power of the U.S. dollar of awesome value, and anyhow he liked the cut of its jib.

These works are the patrimony of all mankind; every single one was bought with the lifeblood of a master spirit. Most of them are from Raly. Italy is a coun-try which can hardly afford to run the most ordinary public services, such as the post office; how can it deal with this very special problem? Nixon's Mandate

In the article by Archibald MacLeish, published in the International Herald Tribune of Nov. 31: he states categorically that in the American presidential election just concluded "If there's a 'mandate,' nobody knows what

In the unlikely event that he was referring to himself as that "nobody," such a statement could have been made only by an arrogant egotist who presumes to speak for the 61 percent of the voting electorate that chose Mr. Mixon, as well as for the 38 per-cent who did not. That he even speaks for the 39 percent is highly doubtful.

Your correspondent knows what the mandate is, and is acquainted personally with a sizable number of other Americans who also know what it is. To start with, the mandate is for Mr. Nixon to appoint to the Supreme Court, when the expectable vacancies occur, over the next four years, justices more nearly of the caliber of those who composed the Supreme Court in let us say, the first 160 years of our country's existence. The progress made in that direction by President Nixon during his first administration is expected to be continued. That undoubtedly is the most important item in the mandate

Highly important too, in the mandate, is for President Nixon to continue the steps he has siresdy taken to ward off the cansed by high governmental deficit spending. That President Niton understands this as part of his mandate is evidenced by his setoing of nine appropriation bills his before the elections.

Then in the foreign relations sphere the mandate is, as C. L. These were not empty words. He was backed by the American people and their representatives in Congress, not only for the well-expressed determination but also pressed determination but also when he acted by sending our first active fighting men to Southeast Asia. Why? Because liberty's survival and success was threatened there for millions of South Victorinese plus the mil-lion North Victorinese who found if possible to flee to the south. So that when given the chan-nels for reform their minds are logged with cynnism and now they have contented themselves with the existing machine of citists. A Changing, Revitalized U.S. House

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON.—The House of Representatives is a deceptive place. Talking about it this past week, a White House legislative liaison man, a labor lobbyist and a veteran of the press gallery all commented on what they called its "static" or "stagnant" quelity.

Yet the case can be made that the House is changing faster than any other part of the national government. When the gaves falls in Jamuary, exactly half its members will be men and women who have begun their House service since 1967.

This "dramatic shift" downward in the seniority structure of the House, as Johns Hopkins political scientist Robert Peabody calls it. has gone largely unremarked even by people who deal professionally with the House day by day.

There has been some comment on the fact that the crop of man representatives 43: Republicans and 25 Democrats—is larger than usual. What has rot been noted is that the 1972 election changes a period of excep-tionally rapid turnover in both houses of Congress.

Forty-fire of the 100 senators who will serve next January were not around six years ago, and 216 of the 433 representatives will also be people who came to Washington in the past six years. When replacements are elected for the missing Hale Boggs and Nick Begion, the majority of the House will be "underclassmen."

The rate of turnover has been more rapid among Republicans than Democrats. Barely onethird of the 192 Republicans have more than eli years' seniority in the House. The opposing tides of the 1964 and 1968 elections and the wave of retirements this past year really cleaned out the Republican side of the aisle.

But even among the more stable Democratic majority, there has been a largely invisible pro-cess of self-renewal inking place. Half the Democratic members in the new Congress will be men and women who have come to Waxhington since 1964, and only 101 members un the majority side have more than a decade of se-

What foes this shift of generations in the House imply? - In policy ferms, the most important fact is that most of the members of the new Congress have no pride of authorship in or reason to defend—the landmark pieces of domestic legislation of the New Deal, the Fair Deal, the New Frontier or the Great Society,
They were not part of that pattern of lawmaking any more than they were pair of the decision-making that led us into the Vicinam quagmire

That should suggest to Richard Nixon, who found the floor of the House the most favorable legislative ground in his first term that there is even more opportunity in the second term to shape a post-New Deal-Great Society Comestic program, if he is so minded.

The implications of the generational change are even great for the House as an institution than they are for its legislative output. The House is the point of entry to national politics for bright young men and women And the new majority in the standard the new majority in the standard in age, but in character, from it is predecessors.

Like those entering other trade and professions; the House new comers band to be men and women in impatient with the old ways of doing business, less willing to "move up the chairs," waiting silently for years for their turns at a subcommittee chairmanship less deferential to their elders, and more insistent on grabbing a piece of the action now.

VW Again No. 1 in Germany ...

Volkswagenwerk regained its No. 1 position in West German auto market in October for the first time this year. New vehicle registration figures from the Federal Motor Office show. VW registrations totaled 40,600 last month compared with 38,800 for Adam Opel, subsidiary of General Motors. But Opel held its lead for the first 10 months of the year registering 397.500 new passenger and estate cars compared with VW's 261,800.

U.S. Aids Chrysler Test Engine

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will sign a $6.4-million contract with Chrysler Corp. to improve its gas turbine engine. The three-year contract, expected to be signed in a few weeks, calls for Chrysler to build seven engines, two of which would be turned over to the agency. The unusual contract would be tha first between EPA and one of the major auto makers for research and development of a commercial engine. The aim of the work is to reduce nitrogen oxides produced by tha turbine, increase gas mileage at low speeds and better the turbine's reliability through improved manufacturing tech-

Japan Electronics Exports Curb

The Electronic Industries Association of Japan decided to voluntarily restrict exports of 24 electronic items for one year retroactive to Sept. 1 to cooperate in the government's drive to avoid a second yen revaluation. The 24 items include phonographs, radio sets, hi-fi speaker systems and their amplifiers, cathode-ray tubes for both black and white and color television sets, thermionic tubes for telecommunication receivers, tape recorders and tape decks. The association said it expects exports of these Items during the period to drop to $1.86 billion, about 10 percent less than would have been the case otherwise.

Fund Promoter Finds Haven in Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP-DJ). McAlpin in 1968, though he was —In the fall of 1968, Clovis W. McAlpin, a Texas-born mutual fund promoter, had a $200,000 home in England, a $430,000 yacht and a chauffeur-driven Rolls-Royce to take him to his London office in the posh Mayfair dis-

"Mac used to have a saying," says a former aide, " It costs me $50 a minute to live."

Then things went down. The 1989-70 stock market slump shrank the assets of his Capital Growth Fund from a peak of perhaps $90 million to about $22.5 million by mid-1970.

Many of the fund's 18,000 shareholders sustained huge losses, The fund's sales office in Zurich was forced to shut by tougher Swiss regulations on foreign investment funds. Mr. McAlpin's own wealth sharply declined and he had to give up many of his expensive

Partial Comeback But the energetic, 55-year-old

Mr. McAlpin appears to have made at least a partial comeback by finding a hazen in Costa Rica. (Robert L. Vesco, accused yesterday by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission of divert-ing more than $224 million from funds managed by Investors Overseas Service, has reportedly purchased a ranch in Costa Rica.)

Even before his mutual fund's fortunes began to sink, Mr. Mc-Alpha made a business deal with Jose Figueres, a distinguished Latin American liberal who is now the president of Costa Rica. President Figueres says he is eager to attract foreign investlation is only 1.8 million, and he says he does not intend becoming a "financial policeman" scrutinizing the past activities of foreign promoters in Costa Rica. Mr. Figueres had been presi-

EIB Issue Sets Record

PARIS, Nov. 28 (IHT).-The European Investment Bank set a record today by raising the amount of its 15-year Eurobond by $10 million to a total of $75 million. According to hanks managing the offering, the increase makes it the largest single issue of straight long-term deht ever placed on the Euromarket, topping the $70-million Shell issue marketed last January. The coupon was fixed at 7 percent and it was priced at a discount so that investors paid $995 for each $1,000 facevalued bond. About 30 percent of the EIR issue—the largest single amount - was placed directly in Italy, issue managers report.

preparing to launch a successful ipaign for the presidency, to which he was elected in February 1970. At the time Mr. Pigueres mada the deal, he was running a family-controlled enterprise called Sociedad Agricola Indus-triale San Cristohal SA, which owned a coffee plantation and produced rope. The firm was in poor financial shape; Mr. Figueres was eager to revitalize it with new capital. Enter Mr. McAlpin and Capital Growth Fund, then a Bahamasbased mutual fund that he had formed and headed. Mr. McAlpin would pay $2 million in cash for 50 percent of Communications agreed that Capital Growth Fund stock, according to Capital Growth's financial reports. Tha transaction was approved in September 1968.

'S.S. Give Up'

Mr. McAlpin at the time was making about $200,000 a year, ha Some of his income came "give-ups," rebates from commissions paid brokerage firms that bought and sold securities for Capital Growth's investment portfolio. Mr. McAlpin concedes that the New York Stock Exchange has rules prohibiting member firms from kicking back commissions to customers, but he insists that "everything we did, we did legally." He will not be specific, however. He adds that the give-ups helped pay for his yacht, which he christened "Give

According to Mr. McAlpin, Mr. Figueres helped introduce him to top officials of the Costa Rican rnment, then headed by President Jose Trejos Fernandez. Though Costa Rica ordinarily requires that Americans establish a five-year residency to earn citizenship, Mr. McAlpin says he became a citizen by carly 1969.

That put him beyond the reach of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service, though he heatedly denies that potential tax hassles persuaded him to switch citizenship. During the 1969-70 period, Mr. McAlpin also was appointed Costa Rica's economic representative to the Common Market and wound up as " minister counselor" in the embassy in Belgium.

Last year, he completed his move to Costa Rica when he closed down Capital Growth's

Merger Voted For Belgian Holding Firm

Four-Way Link Forms Nation's 2d Biggest

BRUSSELS, Nov. 28 (AP-DJ). -Belgium's four-way holding companies merger, combining the Lambert and De Launoit interests, received final approval today when shareholders of Cie. The new company, Cie. Bruxelles Lambert pour la Finance et l'Industrie, will have assets of 11.39 billion Belgian francs (about $254 million). It will be the second-largest holding company in Belgium.

The new entity's interests go well beyond the financially oriented sector that Cie. Lambert fa-vored. Besides banking and insurance, they include steelmaking, brewing, tourism and glassmaking.

Same Policy But Baron Lambert, chairman, Bruxelles Lambert would continue its predecessor com-pany's policy of confining itself to providing financial services and refraining from direct participation in the running of the group's industrial companies. He spoke optimistically about Bruxelles Lambert's future and said its financial results, including the dividend, would probably he higher in 1972 than in 1971. The merger, which the Lambert group had sought for vears. is retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

He said Bruxelies Lamhert would pursue an investment policy based on four principles: Furnishing risk capital to firms with adequate profitability, helping companies rationalize and develop, providing a variety of non-bank financial services and being an institutional investor in certain large enterprises.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP-DJ).—Peter F. Marcus has a rather blunt view of U.S. Steel: "It's the least popular company in the least popular industry," declares the 34-year-old steel industry specialist at Mitchell, Hutchins & Co., a leading research-oriented brokerage concern If you think he is bearish on the company, you are wrong. Rated in a recent survey of money managers as one of the 10 best analysts in the country, Mr. Marcus is telling institutional clients that the time is ripe for buying stock in U.S. Steel, The analyst, who has been covering the steel industry for the past 11 years, will undoubtedly have to use a lot of hard sell to get his message across. The stock has been a dismal performer over tha past decade, far underperforming the

From a $100-pius price tag in 1959, the shares of the country's higgest steel-maker plunged to as low as $25 last year. The security has now recovered somewhat and closed today at 34 1/2, but there is still much lingering suspicion about the stock.

Mr. Marcus stresses that his eyes are not closed to the potential problems, but he argues that 'fundamentals are improving" and he sees a combination of circumstances developing during the next 10 years that should enable U.S. Steel to triple its earnings.

Asida from his expectations of an improved business climate, the analyst asserts that U.S. Steel should be a major heneficiary of renewed vigor in both consumer durable goods and the capital equipment markets. Further, he expects the company to ontperform its industry over the years ahead through heavy cost-cutting, improvement of facilities, a more productive product mix and tha diversion of a substantial portion of its cash flow into more promising non-steel areas. For the current year, Mr. Marcus projects earnings at a disappointing 82.60 to $2.90 a share, versus $2.85 last year. For 1973, he sees earnings rising to between $3 and $3.75. assuming a strong economy. Taking a longer term view, which is the analyst's investment thesis toward U.S. Steel, he thinks earnings will rise to at least $6 a share by 1977 and to a minimum $9 a share in 1982.

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP-DJ) .- "Our conviction on the U.S. economy and the stock market is greater than on the type of stocks to own, and we are tentatively looking for the market to top out again next April." The best value in stocks is in small to medium-sized companies, he told the conference, sponsored by the U.S. magazine Institutional Investor. Although Oppenheimer is not against the holding of high multiple price-earnings stocks and cyclicals, Mr. Brunie said the firm expects great growth over the next few months in second-line stocks.

He said that earnings of small to medium-sized companies are growing faster than those of larger companies, and added, "We think these companies will continue to have superior growth and earnings through 1973."

We're happy to be accused of un-Canadian activities.

Don't get us wrong. We're proud to be a great Canadian bank with over 800 branches.

And on this solid base of resources and experience we've built an international bank of world-wide scope and influence.

Arranging finance for major projects as varied as aircraft in Scandinavia, new roads in Spain, mining in Australia, railways in Brazil, or a steel plant in the United Kingdom.

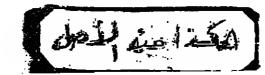

Whatever your own interests, you'll find it valuable to have a good international bank on vour side. Ask for our help. We'll be pleased to show you the full extent of our specialised financial services.

> Ads. It's fun to read the ads in the Herald Tribune for people, places, goods and services all over and services all over the world.

And if you want to place an ad — a single « Personal » item or a whole campaign — no better medium than the Trib. Rates are reasonable.

> Food. The fine art of good esting is a favorite European pastime - and gournets eat up the Tribune's food articles. Where to cat what, and for how much, is covered regularly in the feature pages of the Inter-national Herald Tribune.

"Westdeutsche Landesbank" Once you can say it, you're on to something good.

For a bank based in West Germany, we can provide customers all over the world with a remarkably impressive range of international banking services.

Just about 3 years ago, two leading and long-established German banks joined forces and became the Wastdeutsche Landesbank. Based on total deposits of more than $ 13,000,000,000 we're one of the biggest banks, not only in Germany, but internationally.

Close to the heart

You don't have to do business in Germany to take advantage of our international services. But if you do, we can help you in a number of special ways. To start with, our head offices in the Ruhr place us close to the pulsating heart of industrial Germany — and our unique knowledge and understanding of this region could be valuable to you. In addition.

the Westdeutsche
Landesbank has a
"spacial relationship" with no less than 800 universal savings banks and their more than 15 000 local branches, covering every region. So whichever part of West Germany you're concerned with, this nationwide network is on the spot for you. On the other hand, no matter where in the world you are, or where you're planning something that needs sound financial backing, the Westdeutscha Landesbank can offer you attractive arrangements.

Our international customers appreciate the flexibility of our credit facilities-the cool-headed way we design e special plan to meet eech individual situation, with short, medium or long term credit. Many customers are attracted to our excellent long term credit packages, with fixed interest rates over 10 or even 15 years.

A major power

As an underwriter of international loans, the Westdeutsche Landesbank is a major power on the worldwide banking scene. Time and again, we've proved our expertise in raising money at home and abroad. In all Euro-currencies - not just DMs. We're active in the secondary market, too, participating in virtually all

German bond issues and the majority of bond issues in other Euro-currencies. Once you get to know the Westdeutsche Landesbank. you'll find we're one of the speediest operators in foreign trade banking. Samaday service is a matter of course. And for foreign exchange dealings we are a top address in Germany and internationally with an outstanding team of exparts. And suppose you were negotiating a merger or acquisition somewhere in West Germany. You'd want expert, discreet guidance from impartial advisers. And if your advisers just happaned to heve contacts in 15 000 bank branches, with up-to-the-second information about local business, you'd know you'd come to the right place.

If you'd like to find out more about Westdeutsche Landesbank, get in touch with us at the address below – or through your own bankers. We are also partners in the worldwide Onon banking group. You know where to find us. Now we'd like to show you that we don't attract international customers through our difficult name alone.

ed a second diamond.

Most expert partnerships with ambitions at the national level have an armory of bidding devices and special understandings.

One such device that can be adopted easily by those who play weak two-bids is the Roman Two-Diamond opening, promising a strong three-suited hand. Such hands are awkward to bid in standard methods, for the opener has great difficulty in describing his strength and distribution

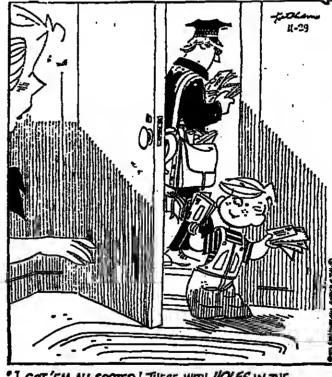

North made the conventional opening, and his partner responded two no-trump. This was posi-tive and asked North to clarify his distribution.

In the original form of the convention. North would now bid his short suit. But the partnership was following a suggestion made by Benito Garozzo, the Italian star, in a slightly different form. North was required to bid the suit immediately below his shortage, so three diamonds showed that he was short in hearts.

The advantage of this maneuver is that the short suit can then be used artificially as a further inquiry about North's hand.

THE DEATH OF THE AUTOMOBILE

By John Jerome. Drawings by Robert Osborn. Nerton, 288 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by John Canaday

So many Americans have come to fear, distrust and even detest the Detroit automobile 10day that to have had your doubts early in the game has become a kind of distinction. I am glad to loved was a Pord V-8 convertible with rumble seat purchased in 1934 and turned in-wirst an emotional moment that was !-- in 1938 for the first of a series of cars, including one of foreign manu-facture, each of which in turn I came to loathe. I haven't owned one of the damned things for 16 years now, and began sticking pins into wax models and melting them down, with incanta-tions, when tall fine and two-tone paint jobs came in. Hence the most optimistic title of all books on this sesson's publishing lists is for me 'The Death of the Automobile," and I only hope that Mr. Jerome's report of the monster's imminent demise is not greatly exaggerated.

Air pollution, which has been the catalyst for public alarm; dangerousness, which, as reveal-ed by Ralph Nader, has made him a kind of holy man for the abused and hilked consumer; inefficiency, as the rities and highways approach complete traffic stasis, and sheer ugliness into the bargain, are in themselves not so much major issues that can be remedied separately as the interlocked components of an ecological and economic disaster. Sa pervasive is it that the antomobile may be an inoperable cancer—if not for our planet, at least for .. the . American continents and Europe, which is not far behind us. (Look at Paris, already clogged and stinking.)

The most alarming part of Mr. Jerome's book, for anyone who has come to hate the automobile for its obvious effects on our lives without analyzing the structure of its viciousness, is his apparently irrefutable argument that every remedy we have tried so far has backfired to worsen the situation, with one supposed boon, the Interstate Highway System, leading the other toboggan runs in the race toward Armareddon.

He ticks off 17 arguments-I hope they come to be known as Jerome's 17-Point Catechismagainst the LHS. His arguments are that it systematically devastates historical regions and parks, kills innercity retail activity, re-moves property from tax rolls at the very time cities are starving for revenue, concentrates high-speed traffic at dangerous levels, becomes a Big Casino for land speculators and puts community planning into their hands, increases population imbalance, subsidizes commercial users at the expense of private users, militates against development of workable public transit systems, costs too much, and causes con-gestion, urban flight, and a host of environmental evils. In short, it compounds every problem that it is supposed to ameliorate as well as other problems we never suspected it would affect.

The autom manufacturers, Mr. Jerome gests, are the present-day eachest of the old-time Ro Barons, who made fortness spolling a virgin continent in guise of developing it.

Because the automobile in try is the most powerful si one out of each six of us, Jerome's book notes, works f living that depends rather dis ly on automobile sales. FOOTBALL—At Hamilion, Ontario, the Hamilion Tiger-Cata, led by a robile place-kicker, Ing Sunter, defeated the Ottawa Rough Riders, 23-8, to take the two-game, total point series, 30-27, and earn the right to represent the Canadian Football League's Exiter Conference in the Grey Cup gamo against the Saskatchewan Roughriders. The Tiger-Cats trailed, 19-7, after the first game of the series.

Primarily a passing team, the Tiger-Cals surprised Ottawa with a strong running attack. But is was the 19-year-old Sunier who accounted for most of their points. He clicked on fire of six field-goal attempts, one louchdown conversion and added a single for 17 points.

hander, appeared in only 19 games last season and posted a 1-2 record with a 3.25 ERA. McMullen, 30, began his big-league career with the Dodgers in 1963 but was traded, along with Frank Howard, to the Washington Senators in 1964. The Senators traded him to California in 1970. This past season Mc-Mullen batted 289, with nine homes and 34 runs batted in. Soccer Wingers Show Signs of Life

By Brian Glanville LONDON, Nov. 28 CHT1 .-Whether or not the winger, the natural and orthodox winger, is dead is a question which perpe-tually torments and intrigues the world of soccer. Ever since Sir Alf Ramsey's "wingless wonders" won the 1986 World Cup, we hava been told that the winger, as such, is obsolete. Yet, there is frequent and convincing evidence that the reports of his death have been greatly exaggerated.

True, the recent, utterly tedious, World Cup international between Wales and England in Cardiff suggested that he might ba dead indeed, as two of the allegedly brightest young wingers in Britain played on opposite sides and were equally ineffectual, This was a tremendous setback for those of us who still believe devotedly in the natural winger. who disdain the more orthodox point of view put recently by the experienced Coventry City manager Joe Mercer, who said they became obsolete when four-inline defenses led to man-to-man, instead of zonal-pivotal, marking with a center-back always covering the fullback. We would answer that there is still nothing to stop the true winger beating tha fullback "down the line," on his outside, with the kind of bodyswerve made famous by Stanley Matthews, Tom Pinney and Gar-

James this season really seemed to give us hope, and so did Keegan. Both play for Lancashire clubs, the 19-year-old Welshman, James, for Blackpool, the 21-year-old Keegan for Liverpool. James, admittedly in the somewhat less taxing circles of the Second Division, has scored some spectacular goals, several of them vividly televised. Keegan, who was discarded by Coventry City as a lad and bought cheaply

Track Stars Ask Autonomy, Threaten AAU With Boycott

By Neil Amdur

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (NYT) .--Top American track and field athletes are prepared to boycott major meets in the United States next year unless the Amateur Athletic Union agrees to establish total autonomy for the sport in this country.

This message will be carried to the AAU today at its annual meeting in Kansas City by a group calling itself the Committet of Concerned Coaches, Athletes and Officials.

Making the presentation in behalf of the group will be Harold Connolly, the four-time Olympic hammer thrower; Georga Frenn, another Olympic hammer thrower, and Martha Watson, the national women's long-jump champion. The group claims a membership of more than 125, including most members of the MOTORBOAT RACING-At Lake Ha-MOTORBOAT RACING—At Lake Ha-vasu, Ariz., Johnnie Sanders overcame a penalty and avoided the waves in tak-ing the $10,000 first prize money in the world outboard championships on Lake Havasu. The 36-year-old Deaver driver, to a 17-toot tunnel-hull powered by a Johnson motor, started late and then was penaltzed a lap for falling to follow the late-start markings properly.

1972 Olympic track and field

"We're going to ask, not de mand, that various revisions be instituted for the administration of track and field," said Connolly by telephone yesterday from his home in Culver City, Calif, before the AAU does not see fit to bend to change, the athletes are prepared to take other measures."

Among the measures discussed at a recent meeting of the group in Newport Beach, Calif., Connolly said, were boycotts of all national championship meets and those to be shown on national television, and applying pressure on potential sponsors of the televised meets.

Connolly said the athletes' pro-tests stemmed from "discontent" over a variety of issues, including the distribution of funds from the AAU's televised series of meets and the alleged failure of top officials to support athletes in international situations.

In one such situation Bob Seagren a 1968 Olympic pole-vault champion, was forced to switch poles shortly before this year's Olympics when his fiberglass model was banned by international federation officials.

inspired wasp. But at Cardiff. Keegan, a debutant, seemed quite overcome by the occasion. James was overplayed by the rugged Peter Storey of Arsenal, rather a fearsome figure whom Arsenal, and even England, inexplicably tend to play in midfield.

From Italy, now; comes another true winger, the 18-year-old Do-menico Caso, who recently had the temerity to turn the Milan defense inside out and score a marvellous goal for Fiorentina, in Florence. He is one of several teen-agers boldly launched this season by Nils Liedholm, that distinguished former Swedish international. He comes, intriguingly, from Eboli, the previously obacure southern town which was put on the literary map of the world, at least, in Carlo Levi's "Christ Stopped at Eboli."

In Levi's book, Eboli became almost the very symbol of tha depressed Italian South, but now, by Liverpool from lowly Scunthe South is at long last really producing good footballers, and Caso is one of them. Another is the 24-year-old Naples insideforward, Giovanni Improta, who is having a splendid season, and blends well with another locally born inside-forward, the inter-national Antonio Juliano

Until only a few years ago, to have an actual Neapolitan in the Naples side would have seemed unthinkable. One is reminded of the experience of Donelli, an Italo-American center-forward who distinguished himself when playing for the United States in the 1934 World Cup, and scored his country's one goal against Italy, in Rome. He was signed by Naples, which prompted the remark, "At last a real Neapolitan in the Naples team!" Another winger who has acquitted himself well this season-and is of remote Italian descent -is Arsenal's Peter Marinello. Eought from Edinburgh's Hibernian three years ago, he spent most of the time wastefully in the reserves. This year, however, his classical winger's gifts of pace, control and swerve have brought him back not only into the Arsenal First Division team, but into the reckoning for a Scottish cap. Since Peter Lorimer, the Leeds and Scotland right-winger with that phenomenal right foot, may be suspended after being provoked and sent off in the Glasgow international against Denmark, Marinello's turn may come sconer than he expected.

Dolphins Top Cards For No. 11

Remain Unbeaten With 31-10 Rout

MIAMI, Nov. 28 (WP). - The unbeaten Miami Dolphins took advantage of six St. Louis mistakes last night to acore a 31-10 victory over the Cardinals and extend their winning streak to 11 games. Safety Dick Anderson inter-cepted Garry Cuozzo'a pass off the hands of Walker Gillette at the St. Louis 29 to set up Miaml'a first touchdown in the opening period. Cornerback Lloyd Mumphord ran an intercepted pass 28 yards for Miami's third touch-down with 4 minutes 11 seconds left in the third quarter to ensure the victory.

Quarterback Earl Morrall

threw touchdown passes of 37 yards in the third period and 27 yards in the final quarter to Otto Stowe. They were the second-year wide receiver's first professional scores. He has been playing in place of Paul War-lield, Miami's premier receiver, who sprained an ankle two weeks ago.

The Dolphins have already clinched the American Conference East Division title and have secured a spot in the National Football League playoffs, Starts With Kick St. Louis scored on a 49-yard fleid goal by Jim Bakken with 7:59 left in the first half, and Leon Burns ran two yards for a touchdown with 9:42 remaining in the final period. The Cardinal touchdown capped a 51-yard drive engineered by quarterback Jim Hart, who replaced Cuozco in the third period after Mumphord turned Cuozzo's third interception into a Miami score.

In addition to the threa interceptions, the Miami defense also halted three St. Louis drives with fumble recoveries.

WASHINGTON.—Among sons trend toward careers in the man- to become a welder. "A welder!" tral skills and cottage industries. Carpentry has become very popular. So has candle making. It has been estimated that one of every three children of the American Upper Class between ages 18 and 25 is now Ilving in a woods making candles. Parents whose children have gooe in for candle making are. naturally, proud of the creativity of

Baker their young. These parents matured during a period when creativity was highly esteemed in America, when it would have been social heresy to point out that creativity is worthless without

They are pleased to have given America children who will create candles. These children—their parents tell you-these children could have spent four years in some ridiculous college preparing for a life of expense account swindling, government consultancies, legalized tax evasion or what-have-you.

Instead, they chose lives of creativity.

From the woods they occasionally send their parents a candle as evidence of progress. After a martini, a parent may produce his latest candle for display. One feels strong pressure to praise the candic excessively and to utter lies. ('I sure wish my kid could make a candle like that,") In fact, most parents feel much better aboot their own children after an evening with parents of a candle maker. Imagine the fairly typical case of parents whose son has dropped out of Yale to become a welder.

Afflicted with all the vices of parenthood, these parents have, quite naturally, always dreamed of having their son go to Yale. There, they believed, he would become a rich tax lawyer who would not only have so much income that he would send the excess to his parents but would also do his father's tax return and teach him all the latest

By Russell Baker

This aream would have been of the well-to-do, there is a shattered with the boy's decision the father would have screamed. "What do welders know about the loopholes?"

In time, these parents meet the parents of the candle makers, of whom every cocktail party in Upper America has a large supply. You see them after the first martini, all around the room, pulling out their candles,

"You'd never guess what that creative kid of mine is doing up in the woods." they say reaching for their candles.

Yes, the welder's parents tell themselves, there is a lot to be said for having a son who can weld. After all, there are always things around the house that need to be welded. It is good to have a son who can get all the welding done when he visits on holidays. Certainly better than having a lot of useless candles on your hands.

Actually, these parents are probably in for another disappointment. In the first place, practically all sons of Upper America who become welders want only to become metal sculptors. After their first three months in the woods they start sending home compositions entitled "Life Cycle," consisting of shorel blades and adding-machine keys welded to automobile muf-

On visits home, they become insulted if asked to go to the cellar and weld something practical, B failing plpe perhaps, or a snapped salad fork Many well-to-do parents doubtless have dreamed of having sons become doctors. With a doctor in the family, it might be possible to have one's appendix removed. without having his entire estate confiscated by some hospital cashier. This dream has faded in many instances with a soo's announcement that he is leaving Harvard and going to the woods to become a plumber.

What should a father say at such a time, on the collarse of his hope of circumventing hospital robbery? Heavy paternal adrice is alwaya appropriate. Tell the boy, in the harsh old-fashioned style, "When you get out there in those woods, Son, stay away from them candle

Slipping by the Censors in Spain and France

DARIS (IHT).-Sidney, the cockney office boy of the Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service in the days when that paper published an edition in Paris, lived a hard life in France. He had been shocked out of his wits when Vincent Sheean irreverently parked the Prince of Wales in a taxi outside the office while he wrote a story and had been kicked downstairs at the Ritz by the mother of Colonel Mc-Cormick, the Tribune's publisher (THT) April 25). No doubt he felt life would be calmer when he was transferred to the Chicago Tribune bureau in his native London. But even there he discovered that American journalism is fertile in surprises.

It was sometime in the early 1930s that I answered the telephone from London and heard Sidney's frantic voice at the other end of the line. "Hi sye," he spluttered, "Tylor's gone stark ryving mad!-We've just 'ad a cyble from im which mykes no bloody sense!"

"Calm down, Sidney," I told him. "We got it too, and it's already been translated and relayed to Chicago."

"Tylor' was Edmond Taylor, who had been dispatched to Spain to investigate a report that there were dangerous disorders in the Asturias about which the Spanish authorities were not anxious that the outside world abould be informed. Press dispatches were being rigorously censored. but every word of Taylor's (which he had filed simultaneously to Paris and London to double its chances of arriving) got through. As I recall it, it began: EVERY-THING HERE CALM PEACEFUL HORSE-FEATHERS. From that point on, it eschewed standard English completely in favor of highly idiomatic American slang, telling in that recondite tongue a tale of violent rioting and equally violent repres-

N.Y. Post Office

I once slipped B story by the Spanish censorship myself, though by a less brilliant method; and I fear that the credit for its success goes not to me, but to the New York post office. At the time of the 1940 exodus from Prance I was supposed to be keeping the New Yorker informed, a task passed on to me hy the late A.J. Liebling, who had left France two weeks before I did. When I crossed the frontier into Spain I wanted to file a story, but Spain would not allow news to be sent out of the country by anyone except duly accredited correspondents whose sympathies, or at least good behavior, had been investigated and found acceptable to the

I knew I could not send a press cable, and I feared that even a bulky letter to an American publication might be stopped; so I addressed an envelope to Mr. Eustace

Tilley, 45 West 43d St., New York, Eustace Tilley, as no doubt you know, though the Spanish censors didn't, is the fletitious monocled gentleman who symobilizes the New Yorker and whose likeness appears yearly on its cover on the anniversary of its first appearance. Writing to Eustace Tilley seemed a little like putting a letter into a bottle and tossing it into the sea. But the New York post office was on the alert and the letter was delivered to the New Yorker.

I was broadcasting for the Mutual Broadcasting System in France during the phony war and the censorship was a minor thorn in flesh. Radio broadcasters were required to submit duplicate copies of their script, which the censors stamped with their visa if it was approved, often after making cuts or changes. The duplicate copy went to the radio engineer, who was supposed to follow it as the broadcast proceeded and cut the speaker off the air if he departed from his prepared text.

In practice. I never had any serious trouble with the censor but once. On that occasion, my cyclist returned from the Information Ministry with an unstamped script which had been rejected in toto.

Waverley Root

Its contents were not really worth going to hat about, for this was during the phony war, there was virtually no news, and in desperation I had built up a story chiefly of quotations from French editorials which had already been published for all the world to read. I suppose it was the very pointlessness of the prohibition which angered me. I wrote a one-sentence substitute script in which I apologized to my listeners for heing unable to deliver my scheduled broadcast since the French censorship for reasons incomprehensible to me. had chosen to forbid American listeners to hear what I had intended to

Armed with this siternative script, my cyclist, a smooth operator, was dispatched to the Information Ministry to demand its visa for the substitute. As he described the ensuing scene to me, colonels began popping out of one office after another and dashing into different ones like characters in a French boulevard farce dodging in and out of bedrooms (which, indeed, was what these offices had been a few weeks earlier).

One of them asked, "How many people listen to Mr. Root?" "About 4 million," my cyclist answered. The milling in and out of offices resumed. Then the spokesman of the colonels reappeared ib; some mysterious rule of war, censorship is always a function of colonels, assisted by a scattering of majors), and inquired, "Have you got the first script with you?" By fortunate happenstance (let us not speak of foresight), the cyclist had. The colonel wrenched it away from him and dealt it a victous blow with the visa stamp. "Now you won't need this one, will you?" he snarled. "If Mr. Root can give his original story. I suppose he can be persuaded to forget about the other," my man answered without cracking a smile.

Bad Hour

It was not quite censorship, but the activity of which censorship is only one facet, security, which gave Percy Philips of the New York Times a bad hour or so about this time. An alert if not exceptionally brilliant soldier surprised him at the front in the act of pouring a white powder into his shoes-obviously the makings for invisible ink. Philips was immediately arrested and the consensus of the squad which took him in charge (highest ranking officer a corporal) was that he should be shot on the spot as a spy. Fortunately someone had enough sense to refer the matter to higher authority (a licutenant), who had heard about pouring Footzeaze into tight, new shoes.

Suspiciousness of about the same intellectual caliber accounted for a police descent upon the apartment of my right-hand man, Victor Lusinchi, now New York Times correspondent at Geneva, who was covering the front for Mutual. They took his place apart looking for clandestine radio sending apparatus, for which the chimney in particular was rigorously prob-ed. Finding nothing, they summoned ma to the Prefecture of Police, where I was confronted menacingly with a telegram I had sent to Lusinchi via the French Army press attaché at military headquarwhich read something like this: BROADCAST 052215 4738 No doubt this seemed cryptic, but all it meant was: BROADCAST ON THE FIFTH AT TEN PIFTEEN P M ON WAVELENGTH OF 4738 KILOCYCLES.

The police official in charge glared at me in a manner copied from the latest films on espionage, and roared: "You are broadcasting information to the encmy!"
"Of oourse not," I said. "We broadcast news to the United States through official Preuch facilities." The oficial was surprised. He didn't know that radio could carry all the way across the Atlantic.

"Do you suppose," I asked him, "that if we were radioing to the Germans I would be wiring to Mr. Lusinchi care of the army? We're both accredited to the army as war correspondents. Why didn't you check with the military?"
"We don't get along very well with the army," the policeman said.

motorist went from bad to worse. according to a report in Moroccan daily Maghreb Informations and relayed by Reuters. The unidentified man left his car and went for a drink in a Casablanca cafe. When he emerged, the car had been broken into and a briefcase containing all his papers, including automobile ownership documents, was gone, After reporting the incident to the police, he came back to find the car was gone-towed away for illegal parking. At the municinel car pound be was told be could not have his car without naners proving ownership, so he spent 20 days going from office to "office getting duplicate papers issued, the paper said. But when he returned to the car pound an official told him the car had already been taken away by the "owner" who had produced the proper papers.

Robert Heiss, president of Hollday Photo and Display Co. of Chicago, which has been accused of sex discrimination for not hiring 19-year-old Cynthia Larson of Des Moines, Iowa, as a Santa Claus, said she lost out to two men because they were more "boisterous, ho, ho, ho types." He said the company seeks only to match the "stcreetype image of Santa," "We are not trying to discriminate in any way, shape or form," he said. "We are just trying to meet an image." Iowa Civil Rights Commission has not ruled on her complaint.
